Canada Oat and Oat Product Trade Summary

Canada oat product exports up 4.5% YTD pointing to demand recovery in the major US market, oat exports off to slow start

- Oat product exports are up 4.5% year to-date (Jan-Aug) as US demand recovery continues on lower inflation.
- Food Inflation in the United States is expected to be 1.9% by the end of this quarter, according to Trading Economics (TE) global macro models and analysts' expectations. In the long-term, the United States Food Inflation is projected to trend around 3.4% in 2025, which is near the long-term average, according to TE models
- Oat product exports are up 4.2% to the US, and up 7.8% offshore. Demand continues to fall to Mexico while solid gains are reported to Japan and South Korea.
- Longer term, we look for Canadian oat product exports to establish new highs down the road with near term demand recovery posting modest gains assuming US inflation remains under control as expected
- Canadian raw oat exports are off to a slow start for 2024/25, down 48%. We are expecting lower CY exports for 2024/25 given the forecasted record tight oat supplies and the need to ration oat supplies through higher prices.
